An Oil That Is Priced Everywhere.—Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil was put upon the market without any flourish over thirty years ago. It was put up to meet the wants of a small section, but as soon as its merits became known it had a whole continent for a field, and it is now known and prized throughout this hemisphere. There is nothing equal to it.

A Chicago pastor claims that a horse has an after life. Just because one balked on him once is no reason for him to take his spite out on 'em all like that.

The flies that are now in your kitchen and dining room were probably feasting on some indescribable nastiness less than an hour ago, and as a single fly often carries many thousands of disease germs attached to its hairy body, it is the duty of every housekeeper to assist in exterminating this worst enemy of the human race. Wilson's Fly Pads kill flies in such immense quantities as cannot be approached by any other fly killer.

No Ability to Digest Food

NERVOUS SYSTEM SO EXHAUSTED THAT VITAL ORGANS ARE FEEBLE IN ACTION

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

The digestive system is a wonderful piece of machinery, but power is necessary to make it effective.

In this case the power is the nerve force contained in the body, and, if the nerve force is lacking the digestive system becomes crippled and there is suffering from indigestion, nervous headaches, neuralgic pains, dizzy spells, weakness and discouragement.

Strength cannot be regained from the food you eat so long as digestion is so imperfect, but you can be restored by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which contains in condensed pill form the very elements of nature which go to form new nerve force.

Overwork, worry, anxiety and excessive mental effort exhaust the nervous system at a tremendous rate, and repair must be made before some dreadful form of disease sets in. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food invigorates the nerves which control the digestive fluids, sharpens the appetite, is slightly laxative, so as to encourage the action of the bowels and strengthens every organ of the body.

You can use this treatment feeling certain that every dose is doing you at least some good, and can prove it by noting your increase in weight.

SPINNING ASBESTOS.

One Thread a Hundred Yards in Length May Weigh But an Ounce.
Asbestos was first mined in Italy, and prior to 1880 it was the only country that produced it at a commercial profit. The Italian asbestos is very silky in appearance and gray to brown in color. Often the fibers are several feet in length.

Asbestos upon leaving the cobbing sheds is sent to the spinning mills in bags holding about 100 pounds. Upon its arrival it is first forwarded by a machine similar to the saw tooth pin used in cotton mills. This separates the tangled fibers, after which a final carding takes place on a regular carding machine. When the asbestos leaves the carding machine it is combed smoothly and the fibers laid parallel in a uniform mass. This mass is treated in a rola spinning machine.

This first spins it into a coarse yarn and then draws and spins the yarn until it becomes fine and quite strong. Where a hard, strong thread is required for certain fabrics the asbestos yarn is put into a doubling and twisting machine, where two or more of the yarn threads are combined. Of course if the asbestos is to be impregnated with rubber a smooth, hard finished thread is not desirable.

The spinning of asbestos for a long time seemed of great difficulty, owing to the manner in which the threads persisted in slipping past each other. Finally it was discovered that under the microscope a thread of asbestos showed a notched surface and that by means of special twisting the spinning could be made successful. Now, after much experimenting, manufacturers are able to spin a single asbestos thread of 100 yards in length not weighing over an ounce.

Came to Life Again.

China as well as other lands has its humorists. A woman once visited the office of an insurance company in Shanghai and made a claim as the wife and beneficiary of one of the company's policyholders who had died, she said, at a place fifty miles removed from Shanghai. She was angry when the company told her that the death would have to be verified before payment could be made. Probably as the result of the threatened injury the following letter was received from the "deceased" a few days later:

"Dear Sir—Yesterday a letter with reference to the death claim was sent you by post. I presume same has been duly received by you.

"When I died of a disease that came on suddenly an intelligent doctor was once asked for. He forced some fluid into my mouth and made some injection on my body. He thus succeeded in bringing me to life again."

Too Eager.

Sir Henry Irving once had an amusing experience in Glasgow. For the part of the young prince in "Charles I." a little Scotch girl had been engaged. She had been carefully coached and all went well until she appeared in the poignant scene where Mr. Irving as Charles has an agonizing leave taking with his wife and children and goes out to execution. "Promise me," Charles says to the little prince, "that you will take care of your mother. And swear that you will never let them make you king while your mother Charles is alive," to which the child is supposed to reply, "I'll be torn to pieces first."

On this dreadful night, however, Mr. Irving only got as far as "promise me that you will take care of your mother" when out piped shrilly the annihilating reply, "I'll be torn to pieces first."

'He Sang Them Out.

A new porter was put to work at an Irish railway station and was instructed to announce distinctly the destination of each train as it came in. Shortly after there was an arrival and the porter lustily yelled: "Changear for Limerick galwayanmayo."

The station master, who was standing near, reproved his subordinate. "Haven't I told you," he said, "to sing out the names of the stations clearly and distinctly? Bear it in mind. Sing 'em out! D'ye hear?" "I will, sir," replied the porter, and the passengers in the next train that arrived were considerably astonished to hear the new official singing, "Sweet dreamland faces, passing to and fro, change here for Limerick, Galway and Mayo!"

Brutality to Sea Elephant.

The whole history of the sea elephant is a record of cruel and wasteful slaughter at the hands of man. One other another its haunts in the bleak islands of the southern ocean have been visited and the beasts relentlessly killed off. For more than a century the work of devastation has gone on, and now the sea elephants of the south are a scattered remnant, whose extermination will only be averted when it ceases to pay to hunt them down. Already there is happening with the walrus in the north.—London Graphic.

Watched.

"No, Herbert," whispered the maid; "you mustn't put your arm around me. We are watched."

Herbert looked around the dimly lighted parlor.

"Oh, yes," he smiled; "I see there's a rubber plant at the other end of the room."

"Sh! There's another one that you don't see. Johnny's hiding there."

Knew How to Say Amen.

A little girl prayed that the Lord would keep her naughty brother from catching the birds and then said to her mother:

"I feel sure the Lord won't let him do it, mamma, for I've smashed up his traps."

The Main Point.

"Say, dad, guess a dime."
"Your words are about and even coarse, my son. You should say 'Father, will you oblige me with 10 cents? That sounds very much better.'"

"Well, do I get it?"

SCOTTISH ABSTINENCE.

Scottish Minister Protests Against Alfred Austin's Story.

An angry Scottish clergyman has written to the London Times in protest against a slander upon the Scotch nation incorporated by Mr. Alfred Austin in his autobiography. Mr. Austin once went to Irvine to unveil a statue of Robert Burns. His writer:

On my arrival I spent the evening with the local authorities, and at the supper or early dinner to which they treated me as a guest, I fear they must have thought me a poor creature, unless they were familiar with Southern ways—for I drank sparingly, according to my custom, while they, to my amazement, tossed off glass after glass of whisky neat, remaining just as sober as when we sat down.

The minister of Irvine, as one of the few survivors of that memorable occasion, makes effective denial, and leaves little doubt as to who is the better literary craftsman of the two men.

"Mr. Austin was entertained by the late Provost Breckenridge, not to supper or early dinner—what a strange inversion!—but to dinner somewhat after eight o'clock. I do not know what Mr. Austin drank. I was not so rude as to note, but I take his word. Will he take mine? It is not, and in my experience it never has been, the habit of the local authorities to 'toss off glass after glass of whisky.' It certainly was not the case that night. Further, those hardy drinkers—according to Mr. Austin—would not have the hardihood to drink whisky 'neat.' There is one part of his story true—they were 'just as sober as before we sat down.' So they were, for an obvious reason: they happened to be well-bred men. Mr. Austin is, perhaps, as ignorant of Northern ways as he supposes us to be of Southern. Was he surprised that we were not all dressed in kilts? We have had evidently 'a chiel' among us makin'—not takin'—notes, and now that he has printed them, they must, if they are all like this sample, be a monument of poetic inventive genius."

King's Sons Commoners.

The announcement that when the proper time comes it is the intention of the King to revive for his younger sons dukedoms, such as those of Kent, Sussex, and Gloucester, which are connected with royal family, and that the Duke of Kent has, in fact, been chosen already for Prince Albert, brings home the fact that as the children of a peer have no special advantage so neither have the younger children of the King himself. The King's wife, his eldest son, his eldest daughter, and his eldest son's wife all have special advantages by law. His other children have no special status unless their father thinks good to raise them to the peerage.

As the law of England knows no classes of men except peers and commoners, it follows that the younger children of the King—the eldest is born Duke of Cornwall—are in strictness of speech commoners, unless they are personally raised to the peerage. There is nothing to hinder a King's son, not being a peer, from voting at an election, or from being elected to the House of Commons; and if he committed a crime he would be tried, not by the House of Peers or the Court of the High Lord Steward, but by a common jury.

More precedence and titles have nothing to do with the matter, though probably a good deal of confusion arises from the modern fashion of calling all the children of the King "Princes" or "Princesses."

A Trifling Incident.

An Irishman went into a barber shop, and the unsteady gait with which he approached the chair showed that he had been imbibing of the produce of the still. He wanted his hair cut, and while the barber was getting him ready went off into a sleep. His head kept bobbing from one side to the other, and at length the barber in making a snip cut off the lower part of his ear. The barber gasped, then jumped about and howled, and a crowd of neighbors rushed in. Finally the demonstration became so great that it began to attract the attention of the man in the chair, and he opened one eye and said, "Wh-wh-what's the matter wid yez?"

"Good Lord!" said the barber. "I've cut off the whole lower part of your ear."

Gave Him Satisfaction.

Once, while stopping at a country inn, Stephen Incedon, an eminent English tenor of other days, quarrelled during the evening with an army officer. He imagined he had closed the controversy by going off to bed, but the officer, left downstairs to brood over his wrongs, thought otherwise. Making his way to Incedon's bedroom, he found the singer fast asleep. Waking him, the officer demanded satisfaction. "Satisfaction?" murmured Incedon, sleepily. "Well, you shall have it." Whereupon he sat up in bed and sang "Black-Eyed Susan" in his best style. "There," he said, lying down again, "my singing of that song has given satisfaction to thousands," and turned over and went to sleep again.

"Maggot Cure."

Following upon the many attempts to find a cure for consumption, the "maggot cure" is being experimented with at Shipton, and also, on a more ambitious scale, at Denholme. A wooden building at some distance from the town, owned by Messrs. Clark & Co., maggot breeders, is the scene of the trial. The view is that the patient must inhale the ammonia-like fumes given off by myriads of maggots. The "cure" is being tested by a couple of ladies.

Through indiscretion in eating green fruit in summer many children become subject to cholera morbus caused by irritating acids that act violently on the lining of the intestines. Pains and dangerous purgings ensue, and the delicate system of the child suffers under the strain. In such cases the safest and surest medicine is Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. It will check the inflammation and save the child's life.

ORIGIN OF PHRASES.

The Famous "Hobson" Was Owner of a Livery Stable.

When we speak facetiously of someone for whom we have a reverence as having "kicked the bucket" we employ a phrase that would seem to be a piece of latter-day slang, but, as a matter of fact, it dates back to old England, when, about the year 1725, one Bolover hung himself to a beam while standing on the bottom of a bucket and then kicked the bucket away. Although at first used only in cases of suicide, it has applied in the course of years to any death, without distinction.

When we take what we can get and not what we want and call it "Hobson's choice" we are not referring to a gentleman who once was famous because of his kissing capacity, and is now endeavoring to scare the wits out of us with dire predictions of a Japanese invasion.

The Hobson of the popular phrase was another one, and his vocation was more peaceful, although he preyed upon the pocket-books of his countrymen. His given name was Tobias, and he was the first man in England to run a livery stable and to rent out steeds to the horseback riding galleons of that long-ago day. While his stable was well filled with horses, they were, as usual, in livery stables, of varying degrees of speediness, but no choice was permitted his customers. The horse that stood nearest the door, whether he was graven, ring-boned or a thoroughbred, was the one that the next customer had to take, and they were all rented at the same rates. Hence "Hobson's choice" came to be a synonym for no choice at all, which is the sense in which we use it to-day.

If you make a lucky turn in the stock market and tell your friends about it, someone will doubtless say, "Well, that's a feather in your cap. He knows something of the vagaries of the quotation board, but it will be a safe bet that he does not know that he is using an expression many hundred years old. In that vast storehouse of everything that is historical, quaint, and unusual, the British Museum, is a manuscript book written by one Lansdowne, and describing his travels in Hungary in 1598, at which time that country was almost unknown to his countrymen. Lansdowne says: "It hath been an ancient custom amongst them that none should wear a fether but he who had killed a Turk, to whom only it was lawful to shew the number of his slain enemies by the number of fethers in his cappe."

A Genius?

Mr. Hitchcock, the news editor of the great daily, had only the junior reporter at hand, and news of a shooting case had come in.

A man had married a girl at four o'clock the afternoon before, and at eight the same evening had shot at her five times.

"What shall I do?" asked the reporter.

"Get an interview from the girl," said Hitchcock.

"But I don't know what to ask her," objected the reporter.

Hitchcock got up from the chair, walked over the wall, and beat his head against the plaster three times. "I don't think you understand," he told the youth with as much patience as he could muster. "Married at four and shot at five times at eight. Go and get the story."

"Well, what shall I ask her?" queried the reporter.

Hitchcock, looking pained and grieved, said, "Ask her whether she considers the conduct of her husband an insult or merely studied indifference."—London Opinion.

For Health and Economy Eat more Bread

TEN cents will feed an ordinary family a day on first class bread. This does not mean ordinary bread. For there is an important difference between ordinary bread and first class bread.

It isn't a difference of looks or methods of making or baking. It is a difference of nutrition, food value, healthfulness. And this food value depends on the flour used. For there is a wide difference between flours.

If all flour were the best flour, then all bread, properly made, would be good bread. But all flour is not first class because all wheat is not first class. Wheat, you know, varies in quality almost as much as apples or potatoes; there are as many different grades of wheat as there are grades of butter—or wool.

And every difference in grade represents an actual difference in nourishing value, food elements, wholesomeness. Flour made from a low grade of wheat is by no means so healthful as flour made from high grade wheat. Now the wheat that goes into

is of the very highest grade. It contains the highest possible percentage of nutritive value. The makers of "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" maintain expensive laboratories and baking departments where skilled men scientifically analyse each day's milling. None but the very best Red Fife wheat—rich in nutrition and healthfulness—can pass. For this reason bread made from ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR contains the maximum of food value and furnishes the maximum of energy and strength. And for the same reason "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" makes the finest pies, cakes, biscuits, muffins, rolls, and pastry of all kinds. It is the one flour that a housewife should use in order to have her household baking strictly first class.

"Ogilvie's Book for a Cook" with 125 pages of Recipes that have been tried and tested will be sent free to your address if you mention the name of your dealer. 133 The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co. Limited, Montreal, Fort William, Winnipeg.
